Lack of Inspectors.

Lack of Inspectors.

In explaining the lact of inspectors last night, Mayor Thompson said: "When the council created the office of inspector of provisions a few months ago, I appointed J. Parley White to fill the place. It has never acted upon that nomination. Dr. Beatty, who is chairman of the sanitary committee, to chairman of the sanitary committee, to which it was referred, held up the nomination for months and then the council abolished the office. The council has not given me an opportunity to appoint another man nor to fill the place.

Bridges May Leave.

"The $85 per month that was appropriated by Dr. Beatty's resolution was to have been paid to Bridges, who is worth it and who may not stay if he cannot be adequately paid. If he should leave, the only inspection that would be done would be that which I could find time myself to perform.

"Denver, which is a city not more than twice as large in point of area as Salt Lake, has no less than twelve men to do this work."

Dr. Beatty, the father of the resolution which the mayor vetoed, did not care to talk about the matter last night when he was told of the action that had been taken.

It is not known what action the council will take. It is unlikely that there is in the council a sufficient number of votes to pass the resolution over the veto of Mayor Thompson.
